LOVE ERRANT

Love was so frail a thing,
So sweet and pale a thing,
I could not hold him;
So when he fled from me,
Fled from my dwelling, free,
Could I then scold him?

Sadly I sought him where,
Up with the lark in air,
Down mid the clover;
Swept by the summer breeze,
Fed by the honey bees,
Tarried my rover.

But still I stray alone,
Weary and woe begone,
Calling him ever;
Will he then wing his way
Back, at the close of day?
My heart says, "never."

A WALK BY THE RIVER AT NIGHT

(CHINESE SONG)

Like a hundred hov'ring fire-flies, 'round the windows far and wide,
Paper lanterns, green or golden, burn along the river side.
Thro' the dark I hear a plashing, ever more and more remote,
Creak of oars, and wash of water, rippling round a hidden boat.
Now it fades afar, but softly on the night that else were mute,
Come the tender, plaintive pipings of a silver throated flute.
Someone plays it while they drift along beside the starry dome,
Now I know the little pleasure boat is drawing near to home.
